Every ten years, Lycoming College goes through an extensive re-accreditation process. On March 11, as part of this process, a team from the Middle States Commission on Higher Education visited the Lycoming College campus, spending four days talking to faculty, staff and students.

A summary of the their findings is found in their report's conclusion, excerpted here.

This is an exceptional college with committed faculty, staff, and students. The progress of the College during the past ten years is remarkable, and reason for real pride. We commend the trustees, president, the faculty, the administration, and the staff for their wisdom, values, and hard work on behalf of Lycoming.

“You are worth more than you think you are.”

The Team agrees with the Self Study theme that sees this as a time of transition for the College as it moves from a time of healthy goal accomplishment to consider the new challenges of the years ahead.

As we learned in our visit, the College has grown stronger educationally, with a strengthened faculty, enhanced faculty development, a renewed general education program, and the beginnings of program review. The College has also grown stronger financially, principally by growing enrollment, but also by growth of the endowment and voluntary support.

Because enrollment is now believed to be at its optimal level, student fees—the source of over 85% of the College’s revenue—are expected to grow at a slower rate. Endowment and gifts, while expected to grow substantially, are not likely to keep pace with the growth in expenses. The result is projected to be a slower growth rate for income than for expenses. In addition, for the first time in several decades, the College is anticipating a substantial number of faculty retirements as its faculty age profile advances which, by definition, not only creates change but also opportunity. The Board of Trustees, through its own reorganization, and the administration and faculty through the newly developed and evolving planning process, are preparing to engage these challenges in a forthright and forward-looking way. To plan in anticipation of challenge, rather than react when forced, is reason for real commendation. Few colleges have the foresight or courage to look forward in this way.

The College must engage more completely and in a more sophisticated way in outcomes assessment. Even if the College were not thinking of its future vitality, regulatory pressures and public accountability requirements at the national and state level are making outcomes assessment a growing necessity. With our tax-exempt status, we operate under a public trust, and the fact is that the public has questions about what we are doing and how well we are doing it. To preempt legislative intervention, every regional accrediting organization is moving toward requiring that colleges define clear goals, identify measurable outcomes, and implement credible measuring systems (at the level of the whole as well as at the departmental level). ...It is time now to begin taking assessment at Lycoming to a new level for the institution as a whole and within every academic department and administrative unit.

While the Team noted an enormously positive attitude of trustees, faculty, and administration toward each other—much more positive than many colleges can claim—we also noted a consistent plea for more shared information. This plea was typically framed as failure of communication, and the Team, while recognizing that this is the plague of virtually every college, also believes that improving communication will require real effort on the part of all constituencies. At the same time, the Team believes that part of the challenge may result simply from the lack of communicable information, for the administration is lean and there is little time for anyone to develop and circulate even routine fact-book-type information, let alone to collect, analyze, and disseminate more complex information. In support of growing communication, as well as because of the essential role it can play in both planning and assessment, we believe that the College should consider strengthening the support for its institutional research function.

All of the above comments come from us as endorsement of the direction in which the College is moving, and as suggestions to further empower these important developments.

Bill Shore’s book, The Cathedral Within, gives advice on how each person can make the most of life and do something that counts. As he says (p.5), “Doing something that counts. Something that not only makes a difference, but has a lasting impact. It’s a basic human need, like water or calcium.” While many today are searching for such meaning, Lycoming does not need to read this book, for this place and its people are clearly making a difference by what is done here and the impact is indeed lasting. There is a refreshing humility that people here display; meaningful engagement in lives rather than grandiose public claims is the focus of thinking and activity. Lycoming is truly a temple within, and people here should feel less reticence than we detected for expressing confidence in the quality and character and importance of this fine College. You are, again, in Shore’s words, “worth more than you think you are.” Step back, for from up close no worthy cathedral can be fully appreciated. Step back and feel deserved pride in the cathedral that is Lycoming. While we know that, as with the truly great artisan, a sense of humility will still prevail, we also believe you will agree that the accomplishments here are stunning indeed. ▲

Lycoming's creative writing program began in 1988 after Dr. Emily R. Jensen, department chair at the time, studied the value of such a program for the English department and for the college as a whole.

"I knew that creative writing had become a popular subject in undergraduate education," Jensen said.

Finding no other strong creative writing programs in the area, Jensen believed that one established here would succeed if staffed carefully.

President James E. Douthat credits Jensen with the vision for the program. "She certainly was the catalyst as well as the driving force behind the program," he said.

Since its inception, the program, which has been compared in quality to a graduate-school MFA program, has consistently had about 15 majors. But it is three members of this year's graduating class who are getting the most attention, although the professors note that there are many very talented students.

Ellen Caswell writes both poetry and fiction and recently had two of her poems published in the High Plains Literary Review, published in Denver, Colorado.

Maggie Gerrity is a fiction writer who has just finished her third revision of a full-length novel. She has stories under review by Esquire Magazine and The Atlantic Monthly.

Vanessa Stauffer is a poet who has had work published in the High Plains Literary Review, Crab Orchard Review (Southern Illinois University), and Brilliant Corners, a nationally circulated journal founded by Lycoming College professor Dr. Sascha Feinstein.

In addition, all three have been accepted to prestigious creative writing programs for graduate school. Ellen will go to the University of Arizona at Tucson, whose graduate program is ranked in the top ten in the nation. Maggie will go to Florida State, which accepts 10 fiction writers a year. Vanessa is headed to the University of Houston, which takes only three poets each year.

Creative

Writing

P r o g r a m

Lycoming College's creative writing program is relatively new, small, and very successful. And never has its success been more apparent than with this year's graduating class.

First Row: Vanessa Stauffer, Ellen Caswell, Maggie Gerrits.
Seated: G. W. Hawkes, Sascha Feinstein, Standing: Emily Jensen

Their accomplishments are testament to the strength of Lycoming's creative writing program, and that strength has set Lycoming apart from other colleges.

"I had wanted to go to Elizabethtown College since I was in seventh grade," Vanessa says. "But I came to see this school, too. As soon as I set foot on campus, I knew I was going to go to school here. It was the best irrational decision I ever made."

Why have they, and the program in general, been so successful? "Hawkes and Feinstein" they say in unison.

G.W. Hawkes joined the program in 1989, just a year after it was created. He is the author of five books, including three novels: Surveyor, Semaphore, and, most recently, Gambler's Rose.

"Sascha and I are a good partnership. We teach just differently enough that students aren't getting the same eye," he says.

Sascha Feinstein came to Lycoming College in 1995. He focuses on poetry and jazz and is the author of five books, including Misterioso, winner of the 1999 Hayden Carruth Award.

"I look at my teaching as an extension of my writing," Feinstein says. "I find it clarifies my understanding of the craft; I work through problems with them."

"We're both at the top of our game right now," Hawkes says. "Perhaps our own excitement is infectious to our students." He adds, though, that creating a community of writers is instrumental to a student's growth. "These three have been instrumental in making sure that happens. They live together, eat together, and respond to each other's work. If any kudos are going out, it's to them."

While the relationship among Ellen, Maggie and Vanessa, and the rest of the creative writing students is a close one, so is the relationship between students and professors.

Jazz and Poetry night, part of the Lycoming College Reading Series, brought together five poets and a local jazz trio on April 10. The poets included Rick Madigan and Jan Selving from East Stroudsburg as well as Steve Cramer '97 and Peggy Cronin '84, both graduates of Lycoming College, and Vanessa Stauffer, a senior Lycoming College creative writing major.

All had one thing in common: their work has been published in Brilliant Corners: A Journal of Jazz & Literature. The nationally distributed journal is published by Lycoming College with Dr. Sascha Feinstein as founding editor.

Jan Selving teaches at Allentown College of Saint Francis de Sales. Rick Madigan is associate professor of English at East Stroudsburg University.

Peggy Cronin is a writer and teacher currently working in the Writing Program at Bucknell University. She is co-founder of Erograph, a collaborative writing and performing group based in Boston, Mass..

Steve Cramer received a Master of Arts from City College for Creative Writing. His poems have been published in High Plains Literary Review. He lives in New York City.

Ellen Caswell and Maggie Gerrity hang out in Dr. Feinstein's office.

Hawkes says, "Sascha blurs the line between his professional and his private life. They go out to dinner, he invites them to his home..."

"Hawkes—we call him 'the witch,'" Vanessa says. "He'll make this statement about you and it's totally right."

"He's so intuitive," Ellen adds.

"Sascha suggested I submit [work for publication]," Vanessa says. "I hemmed and hawed. Luckily he was persistent and a year later I finally sent something out."

"I never would have submitted anything on my own," Ellen admits. "Hawkes really pushes you to do things... normally I don't respond well to that, but it's probably helped me. It was Sascha who first mentioned the possibility of publication."

The professors have pushed Maggie in a different way. "I've really spent the last four years discovering that I can be a writer."

Maggie says, "They [Hawkes and Feinstein] have helped my confidence more than anything. If someone would have said to me four years ago that I'd be through six drafts of a novel before I graduated, I would have laughed at them."

But there are certain things at Lycoming that make such accomplishments possible.

"Small classes are...key," says Vanessa.

Hawkes agrees. "It's comfortable. You're working with eight, maybe 10 students at a time. I'd be less comfortable if I had 50 writers to work with. I couldn't give them as much attention as they deserve."

In addition, the college sponsors a reading series that brings well-known writers to the college to not only hold a reading, but to teach classes as well.

"We'll read Philip Levine's latest book and then Levine will come and visit," Feinstein says. "The opportunity for students to read the work and then meet these writers is a really strong experience."

"It's phenomenal," Maggie says about the reading program. "It changed my life." Maggie says poet Mark Doty (under whom Vanessa will be studying at the University of Houston) helped her realize what her own work was about. Fiction writer Al Young also had a great effect on her and her novel.

The students and professors alike hope that their future success will help Lycoming gain a stronger reputation for creative writing.

"Putting Vanessa and Maggie and Ellen in the world will help get our name out," Hawkes says.

"And when Ellen... wins the Pulitzer, Lyco will really be on the map!" Vanessa quips.

"There's no doubt about it: Our creative writing program is becoming recognized. We now have students applying who have already heard about the program from someone else," says James D. Spencer, dean of admissions and financial aid.

In addition, as Jensen predicted in 1986 that it would, the creative writing program has helped Lycoming recruit a different kind of student.

"Students who are interested in our creative writing program tend to be at the high end of the SATs," says Spencer. "We have many students who want to take a couple of creative writing courses, but may actually major in something else."

So what advice do three successful creative writing majors have for incoming majors?

"Read," Vanessa says.

"And only do it if you want to do it," says Ellen. "I think there are a few who are doing it by default or have another major. You really have to like it."

Hawkes reiterates that it's a difficult profession. "The arts is a tricky business, it's not vocational. I can't promise them jobs as artists, and I can't promise them a living. It's a marathon and they know it."

These three certainly do know it but plan to continue pursuing their love of the craft. Ellen plans to go into editing or publishing, while Vanessa and Maggie plan to teach at the college level while furthering their craft.

"My own teachers have been so instrumental... I'd love the chance to reciprocate in some way," Vanessa says as she thinks about the possibility of teaching in the future.

"Sascha and I are both feeling kind of parentally proud of these three young ladies, whether or not we have the right to," Hawkes says. "We'd like them to know we feel the same way about them as they feel about us." He pauses and adds, "find a way to make that sound less sentimental." ▲

Scanner beeps and price checks permeate my dreams like a heavy-handed soundtrack.
The ability to write poems never helps me memorize codes or count back change, much less calm customers insane with the need to get home. Like clothes stuffed among candy racks, I'm out of place. At lunch, I read Suetonius, smile at teenage cashiers as I explain

it's not for school. They don't understand, but some parents do. Between stories about their kids, we swap complaints - common ground.
This is only for the summer, but somehow nine-hour shifts stretch toward permanence.

Kabuki performance of Satome

Eastern and western cultures made contact at Lycoming College during its spring symposium. Under the title East/West: Points of Contact, the event included an academic conference, an artist-in-residence with a public art project, a children's play and a presentation of Kabuki style theatre.

The program was made possible through a generous grant from the Henry Luce Foundation, the first such grant the College has ever received.

Forty presenters from 25 universities in eight states, plus China, gave lectures and presentations on the mutual influence of Eastern and Western cultures. They analyzed interactions between the two cultures in art, religion, history, literature, film and philosophy.

"The East/West Conference was a truly significant event," says Dr. John F. Piper, Jr., Dean of the College. "It opened many new learning opportunities for both our students and the larger Williamsport community. The Conference attracted a substantial number of serious scholars, and their papers opened new vistas on the contact and some-times conflict between the East and the West."

Dr. Benjamin Elman

The two-day event (March 16-17), organized by Profs. Amy Golahny, Lynn Estomin, and Vaughan McTernan, had two keynote speakers. Dr. Benjamin Elman, professor of history at the University of California at Angeles and visiting professor at Princeton University, spoke on how the Jesuits and the Chinese exchanged ideas and knowledge in the fields of science and religion.

Dr. Scott D. Westrem, professor of English and comparative literature at The Graduate Center and Lehman College, CUNY, discussed how European pilgrims reacted to their encounter with the Middle East by examining their travel accounts of Jerusalem around 1350.

Conference presentations in 12 different sessions ranged from "Daylo Koans: The Visionary Rhetoric of Psychedelic Rock Concert Poster, San Francisco 1965-1969," to the Hiroshima Holocaust.

Patrick Nagatani, a nationally known photographer who is particularly interested in large public art, spent a week on campus in March. Nagatani, Prof. Lynn Estomin and ten of her advanced photography and design students created a public art project on the theme of "Acceptance Creates Community."

Thanks to a generous donation of studio time, equipment and help by Terry Wild '69, owner of The Terry Wild Studio, the group was able to create a collage of photos of 20 different people in the Williamsport community who represent a diversity of religion, race, and ethnic backgrounds. The image was turned into a billboard at three high traffic areas of Williamsport, posters displayed in downtown store windows, and a web site: www.lycoming.edu/tolerance. The public art has a purpose, Estomin is quick to point out, to encourage acceptance of diversity in Williamsport.

Billboard size art.

1,000 Cranes

The website is an ongoing project. It includes brief biographies of the people pictured on the billboard; information on the many religions represented; background on the project; a collection of student-designed tolerance posters; links to sites on tolerance, diversity, multiculturalism, and world religions; and teacher resource links.

1,000 Cranes by Katherine Schultz Miller, tells the true story of Sadako Sasaki, a young Japanese girl who died of radiation poisoning 10 years after the bombing of Hiroshima. Before her death, Sasaki began folding 1,000 paper cranes as a symbol of peace. She died before completing her goal, but her classmates folded the remaining cranes.

Jaye Beetem, visiting assistant professor of theatre, got the idea to produce 1,000 Cranes at Lycoming College while helping Chiho Nishimura, a Japanese international student, work on a class project that involved folding the paper cranes. The cast and Alpha Rho Omega sorority folded the 1,000 cranes. At each performance, the audience participated in the crane folding as well.

Oscar Wilde's drama, Salome, was staged by the Drama Department of Queens College (New York) in a heightened theatrical style that blended Japanese kabuki with European symbolism. Salome is based on the Biblical story of Herod and the beheading of John the Baptist. The production was directed by Dallas McCurley. ▲

Commencement

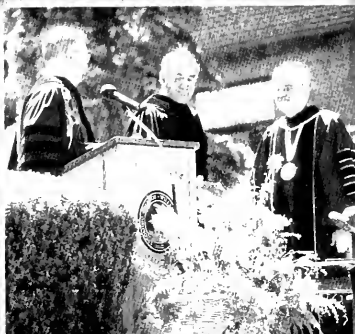

Under blue skies on the oak-lined Quad, 310 graduates received degrees on Sunday, May 6, 2001.

Edmund L. Jenkins, chairman of the Financial Accounting Standards Board and the Commencement speaker, and Daniel G. Fultz '57, the retiring Executive Vice President and Treasurer of Lycoming College, received Honorary Doctor of Laws degrees.

Parents and friends who sought the shade of the oak trees on Sunday could thank Dan Fultz, who was the man who planted the trees nearly 40 years ago.

Jenkins, who had a 38-year career with the accounting giant Arthur Andersen, spoke to the graduates about the value of a liberal arts education... "one that has permitted you to explore a broad landscape of subjects, thoughts, and ideas."

Jenkins counseled the class to "Find a job you love and you'll never have to work a day in your life," his favorite advice from Confucius.

Four Alumni Join
Lycoming College
Board of Trustees

Four alumni are the newest members of the Board of Trustees of Lycoming College. They include Daniel G. Fultz, Rosanna R. Lowry, Carolyn-Kay M. Lundy, and Charles D. Springman.

Daniel G. Fultz

Daniel G. Fultz

Daniel G. Fultz '57 recently retired as Vice President and Treasurer of Lycoming College. In 1989, he retired as vice president for administration from the Schlegel Manufacturing Company of Rochester.

After graduating from Lycoming College, Fultz joined the staff and served as assistant business manager for the next eight years. He moved to Wells College in New York where he was vice president and treasurer before pursuing a career in private business.

In 1993 Fultz received the Dale V. Bower Service Award for outstanding service to the College. In May, he received an honorary doctorate from Lycoming College. Fultz previously served on the Board of Trustees from 1974 to 1990.

The Fultz family endowed the John P. Graham Chair for teaching excellence, named for Professor Emeritus John P. Graham.

At Lycoming

Rosanna R. Lowry,

Rosanna (Roles) Lowry '72 of Montoursville and St. Croix, was an elementary school teacher in the East Lycoming School District for 16 years. She received a master's degree in education administration from Bloomsburg University. Recently retired, she now volunteers at the botanical gardens and the SPCA in St. Croix. She previously served on the Board of Trustees from 1991 to 1994.

Carolyn-Kay Lundy

Carolyn-Kay Lundy '63 of Williamsport has had an active career in community service. At one time and another, she has been president of four different community organizations, including the Williamsport Symphony Board, the Williamsport Home, the Junior League and the Williamsport Lycoming Arts Council. She has also served on the boards of the YWCA, the Hemlock Girl Scouts, the Crippled Children's Society and Friends of the Library and was Division Chairman for the Community Arts Center fund-raising campaign.

Carolyn-Kay

She served on the Executive Board of the Lycoming College Alumni Association from 1988 to 1994.

In addition to a bachelor's degree from Lycoming College, she also holds a Master of Public Administration degree from Marywood University. She is a member of St. Mark's Lutheran Church in Williamsport.

Charles D. Springman

Charles D. Springman '59 received a master's degree from the University of Pittsburgh. He began a career in retailing at Joseph Horne's in Pittsburgh. He later joined the May Department Stores where he served as Senior Vice President in Merchandising and Operations. He retired as the Senior Vice President of Operations for Lord & Taylor.

A resident of Williamsport, Mr. Springman is treasurer of the Ross Club Board of Directors, a member of the Williamsport Rotary, Salvation Army Advisory Board, Board of Directors of the Central Oaks Heights Association, and the Lycoming County Planning Commission, and Vice Chairperson of the Board of Trustees of the Pine Street United Methodist Church. Springman formerly served as Vice Chairman of the Board of Trustees at Dyke College in Cleveland, Ohio, and on the Board of Directors for the National Retail Merchants Association.

Charles D. Springman

Grants and Scholarships

The Chemistry and Biology Departments received a $60,000 grant from the Merck-AAAS Undergraduate Science Research Program for "Interdisciplinary Research in Chemistry and Biology." This is the second year of a three-year program that funds a summer program in research for Lycoming Students. The grant was written by Drs. Holly Bendorf, Michelle Briggs, David Franz, Chriss McDonald, Jeffrey Newman, and Melvin Zimmerman.

The Chemistry Department received a grant of $37,463 from the National Science Foundation CCLI Program and a $20,000 grant from the Dreyfus Foundation for "Incorporation of Mass Spectrometric Investigational Experiments into the Chemistry Curriculum.” These grants were written by Drs. Chriss McDonald, Holly Bendorf, David Franz, and Charles Mahler. The grant money, along with funds from Lycoming College, will be used to purchase a new $83,000 mass spectrometer.

Women of Lycoming Honor Ellen Haley

This year, the scholarship given by The Women of Lycoming was given in memory of the late Ellen Haley, wife of Dr. David Haley. Ellen was an active member of the Women of Lycoming until her death last summer. Ellen was recognized for her service to the CROP Walk, Habitat for Humanity and St. Luke Lutheran Church. The scholarship was awarded to Chris Robbins '01 this year for academic excellence as well as service to college and community.

Lycoming Dedicates Habitat Site

The Lycoming College Chapter of Habitat for Humanity dedicated the site for its new home at 65 Eldred Street on April 21. The dedication ceremony recognized the 23 graduating seniors. Each senior received one-third of a brick from the Buckeye Pretzel Plant that was originally on the site.

As part of the ceremony, members of Tau Kappa Epsilon Fraternity presented Rev. Marco Hunsberger, the campus chapter advisor, with a check for $600, the proceeds from a recent Read-a-thon which broke the Guinness Book of Records.

The chapter needs $52,000. To date, it has $21,000.

TKE Read-a-thon

Have you read any good books lately? Members of the Tau Kappa Epsilon fraternity read everything they could find, including textbooks, to unofficially break the 30-hour Guinness Record for continuous reading out loud.

“I’ve had three hours of sleep, one at a time,” said Patrick Keane, a senior from Northvale, N.J.

The participants were not allowed to leave the room. The six-man group read for 33 hours, fueled by 3 cases of Mountain Dew and a coffeemaker.

The witness log and videotapes have been sent to

Dr. Douthat, Joe Connell, and Rev. Macquiban

Guinness for verification.

TKE’s story made the association press wire and was picked up by more than 30 different newspapers nationwide.

Methodist Scholar from Great Britain Speaks at Lycoming College

Rev. Timothy Macquiban, Director of the Wesley and Methodist Studies Centre at Westminster College in Oxford, England, spoke to a group of local clergy, faculty and students at Lycoming College on Thursday, March 22.

Rev. Macquiban, a scholar of Methodism, outlined the early history of the denomination, which was founded by John Wesley in 1738.

Macquiban went on to enumerate a dozen characteristics of Methodism that set it apart from the Anglican Church of the 18th century.

In particular, Macquiban noted the place of music in the service. “Singing was put back as a central part of the Methodist service.”

Macquiban said, and pointed out that the 18th century churchgoers learned their scripture through the use of hymns.

Wesley’s desire that Methodists should be “a reading people” had direct consequence on the educational systems of both England and the United States. Macquiban noted that Westminster College (in England) and Lycoming College are testimony to the denomination’s interest in education. In 1848, the Methodists purchased The Williamsport Academy, reopening it as Dickinson Seminary, which became Lycoming College in 1947.

Lycoming College has an exchange program with Westminster College, which is affiliated with Oxford University.

“Race and Labor in 20th Century America” Subject of Ewing Lecture

University of Florida history professor Dr. Robert Zieger gave the annual Ewing Lecture at Lycoming College on “Race and Labor in 20th Century America.”

Zieger is the author of nine books, including America’s Great War: World War I and the American

Dr. Zieger with Mrs. Ewing (widow of Robert Ewing) and Dr. David Wäwer of the history department.

Experience (2000), Southern Labor in Transition (1997), and Republicans and Labor (1969). He won the Philip A. Taft Award for the best book in labor history in 1984 and 1995, the only author to win the award twice.

Zieger received his bachelor's degree from Montclair State College in New Jersey, his master's degree from the University of Wyoming, and his Ph.D. from the University of Maryland. He has been teaching at the University of Florida since 1986.

He is a member of his own union: the United Faculties of Florida, and is its delegate to the North Central Florida Central Labor Council.

The Robert H. Ewing Endowed Lectureship was established in 1973 to honor the late Professor Robert H. Ewing, who taught history for 27 years at Lycoming College. The lecture series brings a noted historian to Lycoming College each year. Ewing died in 1991.

Men's Lacrosse

The 2001 season was a record-breaking campaign for the men's lacrosse team as Head Coach Gene Peluso continues to build a winning tradition for the fifth-year program. The Warriors went 12-4 in 2001, setting a new record for victories in a single-season, winning their first ever Middle Atlantic Conference regular-season championship and recording their third consecutive winning season.

A conference record of 7-1 and a six-game winning streak, late in the year, highlighted the season. The regular-season MAC title gave Lycoming home-field advantage throughout the conference tournament and eventually the opportunity to host the championship game. The Warriors defeated FDU-Madison, 16-8, in the semifinals to advance to the championship game for the second time in three seasons. Unfortunately, Lycoming fell to an explosive Messiah team, 10-18, in the title game to claim runner-up honors for the third consecutive year (the MAC did not have playoffs in 2000).

The 2001 Warriors were led by a strong senior class featuring All-American Mark Barnes, and conference all-stars Michael Bonnes, Todd Riescher and Jared Jankowski. Barnes dominated the midfield for Lycoming picking up 162 groundballs while scoring eight goals and assisting on 16 others. Bonnes was the Warriors' leading goal scorer, finding the back of the net 56 times during the season. He is also Lycoming's all-time leading goal scorer with 168 career goals. Riescher was an imposing figure on the Warriors' defense, typically guarding the opponent's top attacker. He also ranked third on the team with 61 groundballs. Jankowski started every game in goal for the team, completing the year with a goals-against-average of 10.04 and a save-percentage of 62.0.

Despite the loss of nine seniors, the future of Lycoming lacrosse continues to look bright. Leading point-scorer and MAC Rookie of the year Sang Duong will return for his sophomore season following a 49-goal, 44-assist performance last season. He will be joined on the attack by Buddy Temple, who scored 27 goals as a junior and was named an MAC first-team all-star, and Dave Dormond, who posted 20 goals as a freshman to earn second-team all-star honors.

Lycoming's women's lacrosse team nearly matched their male counterparts accomplishment for accomplishment in 2001 as they also recorded their most successful season in the program's five-year history. The Warriors finished their first season under the direction of Katherine Roberts with a record of 11-5, setting a new high for wins in a single-season.

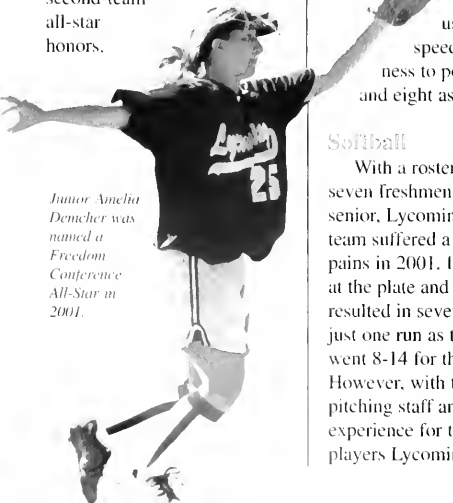

Brenda MacPhail and Lauren Evangelist led Lycoming offensively. MacPhail scored 45 goals and tallied 17 assists to lead the team in both categories. Lycoming's all-time leading scorer completed her collegiate career with 170 goals and 64 assists, and was named a MAC first-team all-star for the fourth consecutive season. Evangelist added 30 goals and eight assists during her freshman season while leading the team in groundballs with 79

Senior attack Hillary Barrett leads Lycoming down the field and caused turnovers with 46. Her performance in the midfield earned her second-team all-star status.

Seniors Hillary Barrett, Lisa Klein, Jessica Miller, Darlene Moyer and Heather Wilt also played key roles in the Warriors' success in 2001. Barrett led the team with 42 draw controls while chipping in 24 goals and six assists. Klein was Lycoming's top defender, earning MAC second-team all-star honors.

Junior Amelia Demcher was named a Freedom Conference All-Star in 2001.

Miller was the Warriors' goalkeeper, stopping 56.6% of opponents' shots-on-goal and recording an impressive 7.78 goals-against-average. Moyer led the team from the midfield, coordinating both the offense and defense. She tallied nine goals and eight assists while picking up 27 groundballs and causing eight turnovers. Wilt was Lycoming's most explosive attacker, using her speed and quickness to post 20 goals and eight assists.

Softball

With a roster featuring seven freshmen and just one senior, Lycoming's softball team suffered a few growing pains in 2001. Inexperience at the plate and in the field resulted in seven losses by just one run as the Warriors went 8-14 for the season. However, with their strong pitching staff and a season of experience for the younger players Lycoming should quickly return to a level of prominence within the conference.

Anchoring the team last season were Kristie Jean and Amelia Demcher. The team's top pitchers, the pair accounted for seven of the Warriors' eight victories. Jean went 4-4 on the season with an earned-run-average of 1.89. In 59 innings pitched, she allowed 16 earned runs while striking out 26 batters. Jean was also one of Lycoming's top hitters, batting .296 with six runs-batted-in and one homerun. Her performance on the mound and in the batters box garnered Rookie of the Year honors from the Freedom Conference. Demcher earned second-team all-star honors for her work in the center of the diamond, going 3-5 with an ERA of just 1.58. She struck out 41 batters in 53 innings of work, allowing 12 earned runs.

Offensively for the Warriors, freshman Laurie Rooney led the team with a batting average of .316. Sophomore Jessica Feerrar was the most productive hitter, driving in 10 runs and connecting for two homeruns.

Track & Field

Vicki Hoover and Laurie Scherer were the top performers for Lycoming's track and field teams in 2001. Hoover, a freshman, placed third at the MAC championships with a toss of 120'2" in the javelin. Scherer also grabbed a third place finish, clearing 4'11" in the high jump. Angela Casselberry, Cara DeMotte, Lauren Derrick and Melissa Wert also competed at the championships.

Scott Condello was the leading runner on the men's team, placing in each of Lycoming's regular-season meets. Condello's top performance came at the DeSales University Invitational where he finished fourth in the 3000-meter steeplechase with a time of 11:03.00.

Men's Tennis

In 2001, Lycoming's men's tennis team posted their best record since 1985, going 3-3 within the conference and 3-4 overall. The Warriors' wins came against Scranton (4-3), DeSales (4-3) and Wilkes (6-1).

Lycoming was led by veteran Scott Moerschbacher and freshman Bernardo Urdaneta. Moerschbacher finished the season with a record of 4-2, playing all his matches at first singles. He was also named a first-team Freedom Conference all-star, just a year after being named the conference Rookie of the Year. Urdaneta compiled a record of 6-3, seeing action at both first and second singles. The Warriors will lose just one player to graduation from last year's team.

Golf

In 2001, a young squad laid the foundation for building a successful men's golf program at Lycoming. When they weren't fighting the weather for time on the links, the Warriors were able to put together strong rounds, Winning foursome Chris Bailey, Ryan Bailey, Wayne Bailey and Lou Engle.

both on the road and at home.

The highlight of the season was a 309-312 victory over Wilkes University on Lycoming's home course. The four-man, 18-hole round of 309 was the lowest score by a Warrior golf team in at least five years.

At the 54-hole MAC Championship held at Shawnee on the Delaware, sophomore Mike Passilla posted a team-best round of 250. He finished 17th overall in the field of 67 golfers. Junior Scott Foura shot Lycoming's second-best score of 266.

Golf Classic

Ninety-six golfers participated in the First Annual Warrior Basketball Golf Classic at Turbot Hills. Winners of the four-man scramble format were: Chris Bailey, Wayne Bailey, Ryan Bailey and Lou Engle.

Book on History of Lycoming College Football

A book on the history of Lycoming College football, written by Tom Aubrey, is now out. The 144-page book, titled "Ten Bucks and a Yes Vote," describes the rise of the college's football program from its reincarnation in 1946 to the end of the millennium. It includes 21 pages of pictures, plus rosters from 1953-1999, all game scores from the seminary days through 1999, and letter winners from 1954 on.

Aubrey, a 1958 graduate of the college and a Warrior fan, got the idea of the book from his own experience as an undergraduate at Lycoming College when football was suspended for a couple of years during the 1950s.

When Aubrey arrived at Lycoming in the fall of 1953, the college had no football. He and his friends used to attend school games at South Williamsport and Williamsport High Schools and Aubrey recalls watching a young running back at Williamsport High School named Frank Girardi (now the head football coach at Lycoming College.). Aubrey was one of the students who wanted to see football come back. On November 10, 1953, the Board of Trustees voted to bring back the sport, but it would require an increase in the student activity fee. "The next step was a student vote, as our activity fee would have to be increased by $10.00," recounts Aubrey. "Needless to say we enthusiastically voted YES! Hence the title: Ten Bucks and a Yes Vote."

Since 1954 — Lycoming College has had just three coaches Dave Busey (1954-66), Budd Whitehill (1967-71) and Frank Girardi (1972 to present). Girardi has had 26 consecutive winning seasons. The team has been in the NCAA Division III playoffs 9 times, and went to the national championship in 1990 and 1997.

The book is available for $18 at the Athletics Office of Lycoming College or $22 through the mail. All profits go to support the Lycoming College Warrior Club. To order a book or for more information, call the Athletics Office at 570-321-4110.

Dr. Fisher with models of the Russian Mir space station in various stages of construction.

Last summer, Dr. David G. Fisher, associate professor of Physics and Astronomy, participated in a NASA Johnson Space Center History Office project. He was among nearly three dozen other national and international volunteers compiling comprehensive technical air-to-ground documentation for all NASA manned space flights covering the Mercury, Gemini, and Apollo programs. As a result of this group effort, a total of 72 critical documents (spanning some 50,000 pages) will become available for researchers in a 1.3-gigabyte CD library. Dr. Fisher served as a technical consultant to Discovery Channel Publishing for a book, Infinite Journey, which is about the manned space program.

Two students, Scott Moerschbacher and Mark O'Brien, accompanied Fisher on the late summer trip to the Kennedy Space Center, joining up with Sarah McDonald '00 (astronomy and physics) now employed as a planetarium operator at Jacksonville's Museum of Science and History). The four toured historic NASA and Air Force launch sites at Cape Canaveral and witnessed the successful launching of Boeing's new Delta III expendable booster. They also attended a briefing given by the recent STS-99 shuttle radar mapping mission's crew. Nicholas O'Dosey '94 (astronomy and physics) served in Mission Control at Johnson Space Center as a major member of the navigation team for that mission).

When the Russians dropped their Mir space station from orbit, Dr. Fisher was interviewed by print, radio and other media. Local articles appeared in the Sunbury Daily Item and the Williamsport Sun-Gazette. fisher@lycoming.edu.

Dr. David Franz, the Frank and Helen Lowry Professor of Chemistry, received the

Constance Cupp Plankenhorn Award this year for teaching excellence. franz@lycoming.edu

Dr. Charles H. Mahler, assistant professor of chemistry, spoke on the Web page he maintains for the Alexander von Humboldt Association of America (AvHAA) at the AvHAA's Third National Meeting, in Atlanta, Georgia, held last June. Other speakers at the meeting included former President Jimmy Carter, biologist Lynn Margulis, and SETI Astronomer Jill Tarter. mahler@lycoming.edu.

Dr. Chriss McDonald, associate professor of chemistry, published a paper on Lycoming research that included Amy Galka, Ahren Green, Joseph Keane, Jennifer Kowalchick, Chris Micklitsch, and David Wisnoski (current and former Lycoming chemistry majors). The research was funded by the Petroleum Research Fund and the paper, "Cyclization of Unsaturated Amides with Triflic Anhydride and Samarium Diodide," was printed in Tetrahedron Letters, 2001, 42, p.163. McDonald has a second article to his credit: "The Oxidation of Alcohols to Esters: Three Related Investigative Experiments," published in the Journal of Chemical Education. Last August at the 220th Meeting of the American Chemical Society in Washington, D.C., McDonald made a presentation on "Incorporation of Spectroscopy-Based Investigational Experiments into the Chemistry Curriculum." mcdonald@lycoming.edu

Dr. Mel Zimmerman, professor of biology, was recognized for his contribution to conservation in Lycoming County at the 41st Annual Banquet of the Lycoming County Conservation District on March 21, 2001. His work on cleaning up small streams in Pennsylvania landed Dr. Zim on the front page of the Green-Gazette. The four-page tabloid was distributed in most of the newspapers throughout Pennsylvania. Zimmerman won a $20,500 Growing Greener Grant from the Pennsylvania DEP and is overseeing the work on Growing Greener projects for the Muncy Watershed Association and the Dunwoody Hunting and Fishing Club with the help of Lyco students. zimmerman@lycoming.edu

Dr. Kathleen D. Pagana, professor of nursing, and Dr. Timothy J. Pagana, have produced the 5th edition of Mosby's Diagnostic and Laboratory Test Reference. Organized alphabetically, more than 330 test entries discuss over 850 specific laboratory and diagnostic procedures in a unique sequence that simulates priorities in the clinical setting. pagana@lycoming.edu

Dr. Santu de Silva, assistant professor of math, is editor of PCTM Magazine, a publication of the Pennsylvania Council of Teachers of Mathematics. PCTM is the state branch of the National Council of teachers of Mathematics, NCTM. desliva@lycoming.edu

Dr. Richard Weida, associate professor of mathematics, presented "As the Curriculum Crosses: One Professor's Response," at the Lily Conference on Excellence in College Teaching last November. weida@lycoming.edu

Humanities

Dr. John F Piper, Jr., professor of history and Dean of the College has a new book out. He is the author of a biography of Robert E. Speer, published by Geneva Press. Speer, a Presbyterian churchman is considered to be one of the leading personalities of the American Protestant Church in the early twentieth century and has been called a prophet of the American Church for his leadership.

The book Robert E. Speer: Prophet of the American Church is available through <http://www.amazon.com>. Dr. Piper first became interested in Robert E. Speer as a graduate student at Duke University. He began serious work on the biography 15 years ago.

Dr. Piper cuts cake at publication party.

Piper has almost fully recovered from a bicycle accident on New Year's Day in which he broke a bone in his shoulder and cracked a couple of ribs. piper@lycoming.edu

Dr. Stephen Griffith, professor of philosophy, has been busy with presentations at four different conferences. He spoke on "Agency, Explanation, and Evolution," at a 5-day conference on naturalism at the Michael Polanyi Center, Baylor University, Texas, last April. Then he switched to evil with a presentation on "Plantinga's Punt," at a conference on "God and Evil" sponsored by the Pew Foundation, at Calvin College, last May. He continued with the problem of Pomegranates" at the Eastern Regional Conference of the Society of Christian Philosophers at the University of South Carolina, May 11-13, 2000. Last summer, he was chosen to participate in a six-week seminar entitled "Design, Self-Organization, and the Integrity of Creation," sponsored by the Fieldstead Institute at Calvin College. griffith@lycoming.edu

Dr. Richard Morris was made a full professor. He also had an article published in the New England Quarterly on "Redefining the Economic Elite in Salem, Massachusetts, 1759-1799: A Tale of Evolution, Not Revolution." morris@lycoming.edu

Dr. John M. Whelan, Jr., professor of philosophy, gave a paper on "The Natural Right to Immediate Retaliation and the Natural Right to Punish," at the Eastern Pennsylvania Philosophical Conference, in November 2000. His article "Famine and Charity" will be reprinted and published in Ethics for Everyday, a McGraw-Hill ethics textbook edited by David Benatar. whelan@lycoming.edu

An article by Dr. David Witwer, assistant professor of history, "Local Rank and File Militancy: The Battle for Teamster Reform in Philadelphia in the Early 1960s," was published in the journal Labor History. Witwer presented a paper entitled, "'Not a Man's Union': Women in the Teamsters Union in the 1940s and 1950s," at the North American Labor History Conference held at Wayne State University and presented "The Problem of Corruption in the Teamsters Union in the 1930s," at the Annual Meeting of the Social Science History Association in Pittsburgh. witwer@lycoming.edu

Dr. Richard Hughes, the M.B. Rich Professor of Religion, had an article titled "Lament in Christian Theology," published in Encounter. This essay was written with the support of a research grant from The Louisville Institute. Another article, "Destiny and Death in the Dostoevsky Biography," was published in Szondiiana, Zeitschrift für Tiefenpsychologie und Beiträge zur Heiligsalsanalyse 20:1, 2000. hughes@lycoming.edu

Dr. Steven Johnson, an assistant professor of religion, is a member of the Editorial Board of the International Q Project and is a volume editor for the multi-volume database series Documenta Q. This project has reconstructed a source for the Gospels of Matthew and Luke which has been published in a volume called The Critical Edition of Q. This summer, Steve will build on the success of last year's dig at Megiddo in Israel by taking six students on a seven week archaeological expedition to Cyprus. Alas, he will miss not only his wife, Ellen, during that time, but also his recently adopted puppy, a border collie mix named Maya. johnson@lycoming.edu

Robin Knauth, instructor in religion, has four articles—"Year of Jubilee," "Sabbatical Year," "Many Waters," "Mixed Multitude," "Rainbow,"—in Erdmans Dictionary of the Bible. Ed. David Noel Freedman. She also presented a paper on "Are There No Graves in Egypt...?" - Supreme Irony, Grave Concern," at the American Schools of Oriental Research 2000 Annual Meeting last November. knauth@lycoming.edu

English and Foreign Language and Literature

Dr. Barbara F. Buedel, associate professor of Spanish, presented a paper entitled "Myopia in Human Relationships: Yolanda Pallín's La mirada and Entiendes?" at the Eleventh International Conference of the Asociación de Literatura Femenina Hispánica, at York University, Toronto, Canada.

Dr. Feinstein plays sax at a recent "Jazz and Poetry reading."

September 21-23, 2000. She presented a revised version, "Myopia and the (Fe)Male Gaze in Yolanda Pallín's La mirada and Entiendes?," at the 25th Annual Colloquium on Literature and Film at West Virginia University, October 12-14, 2000. This revised paper has been accepted for publication in Philological Papers, a peer refereed journal.

Dr. Sascha Feinstein, associate professor of English and co-director of its creative writing program, continues to publish poetry and essays. His poem "Misterioso," the title poem to his award-winning poetry collection, was reprinted in Black Music Research Journal. Two new poems, "Plutonium" and "When the Sun Comes Out," were published in Crab Orchard Review, the national literary journal from Southern Illinois University. Feinstein also contributed an essay to Jazz: The First Century, edited by John Edward Hasse and published by William Morrow Press. He served as editorial advisor for The Norton Anthology of Modern Poetry, as well as two composition texts from McGraw Hill. Meanwhile, he continues as editor of Brilliant Corners: A Journal of Jazz & Literature, producing a summer and winter issue, and receiving a $3,014 grant from the PA Council on the Arts.

Feinstein was tapped as one of the panelists in a session on jazz and poetry at the nationally acclaimed Tennessee Williams Festival in New Orleans. He was also out on the reading circuit, performing at Penn State, The Lawrenceville School, and other venues. Recent interviews with Feinstein were aired on the radio (NPR), published in literary journals (Urban Spaghetti), and printed on the world wide web (Jerry Jazz Musician).

Dr. Gary R. Hafer, associate professor of English, wrote "Ideas in Practice: Supplemental Instruction in Freshman Composition," for a special edition of the Journal of Developmental Education.

Dr. Darby Lewes, an associate professor of English, has signed a contract with Rowman Littlefield to publish "Better Living Through Poetry: The Shelley Circle's Utopian Project."

Buy a Brick

ON THE COMMENCEMENT STEPS

Pave the way for future students

This spring 2001, the steps leading from the gates on Washington Boulevard to the Main Quad were paved with bricks. The gate is often referred to as Graduation Gate, and this is the route that each Lycoming College student takes on his or her way to graduation.

As an alumnus or a special friend of Lycoming College, you now have an opportunity to buy an imprinted brick that will be a permanent part of these steps.

Proceeds from the bricks will fund a special endowed scholarship for a future Lycoming student.

This project is your chance to join other alumni and friends of Lycoming College to permanently commemorate your years and loyalty to Lycoming in a unique way, as a student, employee or friend. In a very real sense, you will be paving the way for future generations of Lycoming graduates.

Be among the first to buy an individual imprinted brick at $225 each. All you need to do is send your check with the order blank provided on this page.

If you would like more information on this brick project, please call Sue McCormick, Director of Alumni and Parent Programs, at 570-321-4134.

Enclose a check made payable to Lycoming College for $225.

Old-style Press Cranks out Last Chapter

Lewisburg man printed more than 30 books

By John Beauge

For the Harrisburg Patriot-News

Edited for space. Reprinted with permission

The nonprofit press of Appletree Alley is closing after 31 books and three chapbooks. What made the enterprise unique is that everything was done the old-fashioned way—hand-set type and manual printing.

"I did it for fun," founder Barnard Taylor [who is also a 1965 graduate in art] said. "It is not a commercial press. I didn't make a thing."

The 86-year-old Lewisburg resident suffers from Parkinson's disease, and he said it has gotten difficult for him to work.

His books were printed on hand- or mould-made papers and hand-bound by bookbinder Donald Rash in Wilkes-Barre. It took six months to complete a book, Taylor said. No more than 150 copies were printed, so each publication was a limited edition, he said.

His source of material included artists in residency at Bucknell University, the university's rare-book collection and works received from a prospectus he mailed. He obtained copyright clearance for works previously published.

One of Appletree's books contained manuscript holdings of D.H. Lawrence, William Morris, Dante Gabriel Rossetti, George Bernard Shaw, Oliver St. John Gogarty and William Butler Yeats.

Another combined contemporary texts with manuscript materials of early 20th century Irish and British authors. The chapbooks, which are smaller than books, contained contemporary poetry.

Several of the books were a collection of letters on a central theme assembled by an associate, Mary Chenoweth Stratton, a former English teacher at Lewisburg High School and a retired adjunct professor of English.

Taylor relied heavily on volunteers such as Juniata Bishop of Lewisburg, who was a regular for more than 12 years. "We'd teach them how to set type," he said.

Appletree publications can be found in major public libraries across the U.S., England and Australia, and at universities such as Harvard and Princeton.

Taylor was born in Chester and grew up in Red Bank, N.J. He wanted to follow in the footsteps of his uncle, H. Weston Taylor, an illustrator for the Saturday Evening Post and Cosmopolitan, so he studied art for three years at the Pennsylvania Academy of Fine Arts in Philadelphia, the oldest art school in the United States.

He completed a bachelor's degree from Lycoming College in 1965 and a master's in fine arts from Penn State University. He started his career as a designer for a Philadelphia publisher and then became a graphic designer and printing salesman for Grit, a national publication that was based in Williamsport.

He later served as director of public relations at Juniata College and retired from Geisinger Medical Center in Danville as manager of public relations. Over the years, he designed publications for a number of academic institutions and had a one-man show of abstract watercolors.

Taylor, who had an ambition to print fine books, was encouraged to start a business by long-time friend John Wheatcroft, professor emeritus of English at Bucknell University.

His objective in starting the Press of Appletree Alley was to print, in crafted volumes, fine writings not commonly available in a style that enhanced the intent of the authors.

In the printing process, each sheet was aligned with precision and run through again for every color of ink used. The sheets were folded, stitched and cut before being sent to the binder.

Barnard Taylor sets type by hand for special book.

Edited from a story in Main Line Times by Jamie Yannaconi.

Back in 1978, when Harry Perretta accepted an opportunity to coach the Villanova University women's basketball team, he had no idea what he was getting himself into. Then a 21-year-old fresh out of Lycoming College, Perretta looked at the part-time position as a way into the coaching business.

"It was a coaching job that opened," Perretta said recently. "I looked at it as, 'Hey, any kind of coaching job, I'd like to get into it.'"

I never thought I'd be a college-level coach."

Perretta, 45, completed his 23rd season as Villanova's coach. On Dec. 2, via a 60-55 victory over Big 5 rival Temple at the Pavilion, the Lycoming College graduate nabbed his 400th career win.

As could be witnessed by the droves of people in attendance at his 400th triumph, Perretta's love for Villanova has been reciprocated many fold during his more than two decades at the school.

"It was fun," Perretta said. "After the game, a lot of people came into the locker room. A lot of the professors at Villanova who I'd known for over 20 years came in. Former players were there. Administrators were there. They had a cake for me. It was pretty neat."

Perretta's wife, Helen, and their 2-year-old son, Stephen, also enjoyed the festivities. An outstanding coach, Perretta's love for basketball began in earnest as a player.

After garnering All-Philadelphia Catholic League honors as a small forward at Monsignor Bonner, Perretta enrolled at Lycoming College in the fall of 1974. Unexpectedly, though, an ankle injury ended Perretta's collegiate playing career during his freshman year.

Nonetheless, the mishap proved to be fortuitous in kick-starting Perretta's coaching career. Perretta became an assistant coach at Lycoming. While earning a bachelor's degree in social studies along with a secondary teaching certificate, Perretta split his time as a coach with Lycoming's varsity and junior varsity men's squads while also helping out with the women's program until his graduation in the spring of 1978.

Thus, despite being just 21, Perretta was well-groomed to be a head coach.

"The year that I graduated, the Villanova job opened," remembered Perretta. "Mary Anne Dowling-the Villanova women's athletic director who was hiring the coach-her husband played at Lycoming, so she knew Dutch Burch, the coach at Lycoming. He gave me a good recommendation, and I wound up getting the job."

Four-hundred-five victories later, Perretta is now a coaching icon at Villanova. During his 23 seasons directing the Wildcats, Perretta has reeled in two Big East Coach-of-the-Year awards and a pair of Big 5 Coach-of-the-Year honors while racking up 14 winning campaigns (not including this season), including nine with at least 20 wins. The dean of Big East coaches, Perretta has led Villanova to a 169-129 mark against conference opponents since the wildcats joined the league in 1982. While Perretta has been at the helm, Villanova has managed to seize eight Big 5 titles, two Big East Conference regular-season titles and a couple of Big East Tournament championships. Perhaps Perretta's most memorable season came in 1981-82, when the 'Cats rolled to a 29-4 record while garnering an AIAW Final Four appearance and a No. 11 AP national ranking.

With success as ample as his, many have wondered why Perretta hasn't tried his hand at coaching the men's game. Has he ever had the itch?

"I don't know if I would do it," said Perretta. "I can't tell you."

Regardless, Perretta doesn't view his players with regard to their gender.

"I don't look at it anymore as women's basketball," said Perretta. "I just look at it as basketball. They're just players to me, and I just think that that's the way I view it now."

Joseph T. Emrick

(history) received a Leavey Award for Excellence in Private Education on May 12, 2001 in Philadelphia. Joseph was one of 19 teachers from 16 programs nationwide to receive the Leavey Award for inspiring the next generation of business leaders through an innovative education program. He received the honor for his project titled, "The Student Corporation."

Endowed by the Thomas and Dorothy Leavey Foundation in Los Angeles, the Leavey Awards recognize educators for innovative techniques in teaching about the free enterprise system. Each winning program receives a $7,500 cash award with one program deemed meritorious receiving $15,000. Since its inception in 1977, the Leavey Awards for Excellence in Private Enterprise Education has recognized more than 300 teachers and has awarded over 2.4 million dollars in award money.

Father Glenn
McCreary '79

Gmc929@aol.com

"I value my experience [at Lycoming]. I received a well grounded education that prepared me for all facets of my life," says Father Glenn McCreary '79. McCreary took full advantage of Lycoming's liberal arts program, majoring in both art and English. While he took courses to fulfill his distribution requirements, he never took a religion course at Lycoming. But then again, he hadn't planned on becoming a priest. That decision came ten years after he graduated from Lycoming, after he worked for both the Lycoming College art department and for his father who was an accountant.

His vocation developed from his involvement as a lay person at St. Boniface Church in Williamsport. He studied for two years at University of Scranton and spent four more years in seminary at Catholic University in Washington, where he did catch up on religion courses and received his master's degree. In 1995 he was ordained as a priest.

Today he is one of three parish priests at Immaculate Conception Church in Scranton, which serves 1800 families and two hospitals in the area. He also teaches at both University of Scranton and Marywood. As the result of the declining numbers of young men entering the priesthood, McCreary is—at the age of 43—the "young" priest of the parish.

While the pendulum may be swinging back, as McCreary believes, the nature of the priesthood has changed. Many more priests, like McCreary are finding their calling as a "second" career often bringing very different life experiences to their new role. Many, like McCreary, have undergraduate degrees in disciplines outside religion.

For McCreary, the call to the priesthood, although late, was the right choice. While he has many charitable interests and modest resources as a priest, he is a consistent donor to the Lycoming Annual Fund.

"I appreciate that Lycoming was there for me," says McCreary, "and I want to make sure that it is there for others."

groups as the Philadelphia Singers Chorale, Delaware Valley Opera Company, the New Jersey Chamber Music Society and Pennsylvania ProMusica.

Donor Profile

Jan Eck Bigelow '86

In her job as Director of Finance for the Pew Center on Global Climate Change, Jan Eck Bigelow '86 is surrounded by people who spend most of their time thinking about the future.

Growing up in Williamsport as the daughter of John Eck, head of Lycoming College food services, she was destined to go to Lycoming College.

What she gained from Lycoming College was a broad liberal arts education that highlighted the importance of continued learning. "In my first accounting job, I was preparing manual spreadsheets - now everything is computerized," she marvels.

As an accounting major, she found a mentor in Prof. Logan Richmond. "He was a wonderful professor," she says. "And he had a lot of insight into what it would take to succeed in the accounting profession."

Succeed she has. After graduation, she moved to Washington D.C. and sat for her CPA. For the next eight years, she worked in public accounting, first specializing in audit and then moving into the tax arena. From there, Jan went to work for The Kiplinger Washington Editors, Inc., a personal finance publishing firm, as its Tax Director. By the time she left Kiplinger in 1999, she had been promoted to Assistant Treasurer. After the birth of her daughter, Sarah, she wanted a job with more flexible hours and found it at Pew.

With her background at Kiplinger, Jan knows a good investment when she sees one. And she thinks a lot about the world in which her children and grandchildren will live. Perhaps, that's why she has chosen to support the Lycoming Annual Fund with increasing amounts each year during the past decade.

"Lycoming College invested in me and I've enjoyed many successes in my career," she says, "plus Lycoming has always been a part of my family. Even though I no longer live in the Williamsport area, I would be thrilled if my daughter chose to attend Lycoming as part of the class of 2017."

LIFE INCOME GIFTS

Are you interested in financial planning that:

- Saves income tax?
- Saves capital gains tax?
- Saves federal estate tax?
- Saves probate costs?
- Increases your income?
- Increases the income you provide for your spouse or other survivor?
- Allows you control in selecting a trustee and percentage of return for a lifetime income?
- Enables you to provide a gift for Lycoming College and support the mission and goals you believe in?

If you answered "Yes" to some or all of these questions, you will be interested in gift options which provide lifetime income and save income tax. We'd be delighted to provide you with more details about these gift planning opportunities. Please call Lauri Fink at (570) 321-4036.

Give

Stock of Lycoming

American taxpayers can make charitable gifts of stocks and bypass capital gains taxes, in effect using paper profits to help reduce federal and, perhaps, state income taxes. Plus the charitable gift is eligible for an income tax deduction at its fair market value at the time it is given as a gift.

Many investors see a charitable gift of stocks as a way to divest themselves of unwanted stock at minimal cost to themselves—and benefit a worthy organization.

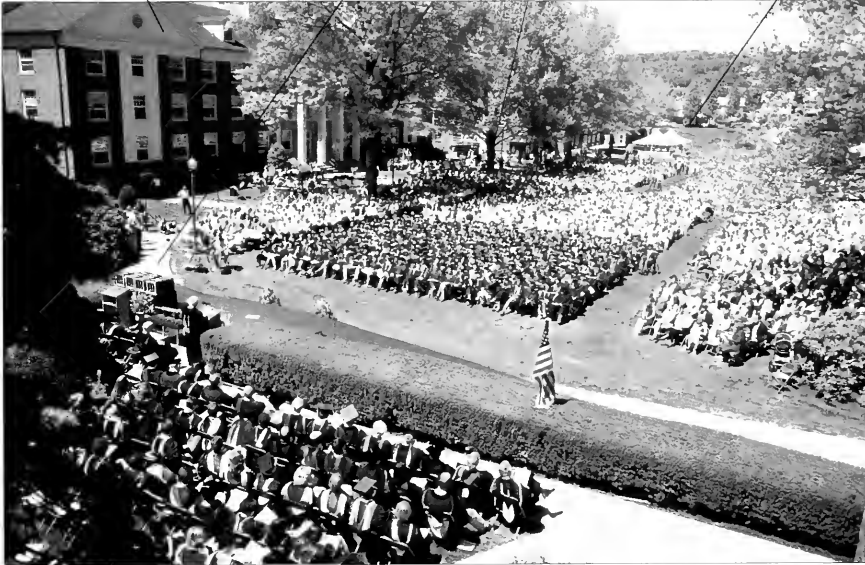

Please note: Stock certificates must be turned over to the College. Selling the stock first will result in capital gains tax.
